Our new post-master took hold of Uncle Sam's possessions at this place last Monday morning and from a little observation I concluded that the following hints would probably assist him in the proper running of the office: 1.—If you ask for mail, and are told there is none, say there ought to be; then go home and send the rest of the family at different times through the day. 2.—Don't bring your letters to the office until the mail closes, then curse the postmaster for not opening the bag and putting your letter in. 3.—When you want a stamp on your letter, tell the postmaster to put it on; if he don't do it, thrash him; in case you put it on yourself, hold it in your mouth long enough to remove the mucilage; it will then stay on until it is dry. 4.—If you have a box, stand and drum on it until the postmaster hands out your mail; it makes him feel good, especially when he is waiting on somebody. 5.—Start for your mail when you hear the train whistle; you will then have a good time waiting for it, and can say, "How slow that postmaster is."

To show what skillful farming will do we publish the following: We noticed in a late issue of the EXPOSITOR some wheat grown by Chas. Mavis on his farm in Greenwood. On the same piece of ground, which grew this wheat, the year before the rag weed choked the peas out and what grain was harvested was picked out by hand. Mr. Mavis summer fallowed it, put what manure he had on the ground and this wheat is the result of his labor.

The next important factor in railroad news is the report that the F. & P. M. company is considering the project of building a broad gauge line direct from Yale to Crosswell thence north. George W. Childs publishes in the July Lippincott's, the second installment of his interesting "Recollections." This installment deals exclusively with reminiscences of General Grant, and the intimate and unbroken friendship which existed between Grant and Childs lends it peculiar value. No biographical sketch that has yet appeared gives so true an insight into the character of the great General. An excellent reproduction of a painting by General Grant serves as a frontispiece to this number of the magazine.

A RATTLED POST-MASTER.—John D. Jones, of the village of Yale, was in the city on Monday. He was mad clear through, and to a Times reporter expressed himself as follows: "I wish the Times would make the crowd who had the name of our village changed from Brockway Centre to Yale. A man is liable to lose his postoffice address. I was recently appointed post-master at Brockway Centre. I spent two days fixing up my bonds and sent them to Washington. Now I have received a letter from the Post-master General informing me that I have been appointed post-master at Yale. This sort of thing makes me dizzy and if it continues I will be unable to tell whether my name is Jones or Brown.—Port Huron Daily Times.

J. M. Loose Red Clover Co.—I purchased a box of your Red Clover Pile Ointment of F. P. Holiday, at this place after using various other ointments without effect. I used several applications of the Red Clover ointment and have not had any trouble since then. I now believe I am permanently cured. My case was not one of the worst, but I have suffered with them over a year, and bled so much I became greatly reduced in flesh. Your ointment acted miraculously, and I am only too glad to speak to the many sufferers of this painful disease. If it cures all who use it as quickly as it did me, you will sell a great deal of it. But I am convinced your Pile Ointment was made to cure, and not like the many others I have tested, to defraud. It is a pleasure to me to say, the Red Clover Pile Ointment has been a priceless blessing to me, and I know it will prove such to others who will try it. Respectfully, I V. Park, Joliet, Ill. For sale by W. N. McKenna.
